“ Democratic Values and Indian Polity ”

– A Summary

Democratic values, including equality, liberty, justice, fraternity, accountability and participation, are the ethical and constitutional underpinning to Indian governance. Enshrined in the Constitution of India, these values are the belief systems that govern it, provide citizens with rights, and allow political power to be socially accountable to the citizenry. Key concerns include:

- equality and discrimination for all communities
- protection of speech, expression, and dissent
- electoral integrity and transparency
- decentralizing through Panchayati Raj and local self-government
- judicial independence and constitutional checks and balances.

Governmental institutions, as well as civil society, are key actors in upholding democratic principles; however, democratic functioning may be compromised or undermined by corruption, political division, disinformation, and inequality in terms of socio-economic status.
